

Free Traffic For Your Website

You may need to jump start website traffic on a tight budget. Starting a web site can deplete your bank account as you pay the necessary high fees and expenses. Free traffic may be (and is) the very thing you need right now. It may seem too good to be true, but it is not. Your investment may not be monetary, but it will require some of your top assets; your time, energy, thought and creativity.

- Links

Linking with other sites is a great way to boost web traffic. Contact similar sites of a size that is comparable with your site. Ask the site owner if they are willing to post your link and offer to post their link on your site. You will both increase your web traffic and increase your search engine rankings. There are many automated methods of link swapping, but I would suggest caution when using them. You need to be aware of your web presence. Also, the routing of the link can impact its benefits.

If you are a writer, you have a great tool for drawing links to your site. By providing content for other sites, you can link back to your own site and increase internet traffic to your site.

Do not hesitate to contact local directory websites, trade associations, or any other web site that may link to your site.

- SEO

This is not always a 'free' method. You can put a lot of money into an SEO strategy. However, by supplying your site with quality content containing keywords, posting a keyword enhanced blog, and increasing links with other sites, you can boost your rankings and find a vast number of visitors arriving at your web site.

A strategy that cooperates with the search engines and caters to the visitors on your site will provide you with a solid base that can give your ebook business growth for many years to come.

Good, old networking can still pay off. Of course, it has taken on a new feel since you may meet a lot of your contacts through forums. Regardless of whether you are doing business face to face, or chatting online, use the opportunity to network. Infiltrate your local and your online community and get to know your competition as well as your clients or buyers. The online community may not have an 'old boy network', but it is a great place to meet people, learn about what is new, and get the news out about your ebook web site.

Free traffic may not be free in the true sense of the word, in that you still need to invest time and energy. As an entrepreneur, you may feel that your time is too valuable for some of these methods, but the pay off can be VERY BIG. Put together a strategy and work steady at it as you can. Over time you will see that you have built a thriving money making ebook business.
